British Ready-to-Wear Designers

It's votes for women, it seems, in this category – the five British collections that received the most votes are all designed by women (Tanya Sarne is the designer behind the Ghost Libell). Here, alongside key looks from their autumn collections, your top six each give their view on where fashion is heading.

KATHERINE HAMMETT

The dress has become much more androgynous, says Hammett herself. "Outside the boxes that most designers go into, there's a feeling of freedom. Fashion is becoming more wearable and comfortable, going through, although with different silhouettes."
